(OTC Bulletin Board: APDN), a provider of DNA security solutions, announced today that it is now on Twitter and has launched its “Reality Check” blog on its website ADNAS.com. Through both venues, APDN will review trends, policies, news, products and innovations and provide commentary on current anti-counterfeiting and anti-diversion concerns, as well as the latest forensic and alternative solutions to protect brands and industries from global fraud and illicit crime.

“We’re a dynamic and innovative company and we are increasing our presence and reach to a larger, global audience,” stated Debbie Bailey, Director of Investor Relations. “Our online portal provides people all around the world with a way to connect with us. Our content will benefit consumers who are concerned with the quality, integrity and authenticity of the products and brands to which they subscribe. Manufacturers, brand owners and governments will find the portal essential to foiling counterfeiters.”

Brand security and protection is increasingly becoming part of the business process, and companies are struggling to identify the best technologies to fight against counterfeiting and diversion. APDN’s increased social media strategy will assist companies quickly find and apply DNA solutions that best meet their security needs.

About APDN

APDN sells patented DNA security solutions to protect products, brands and intellectual property from counterfeiting and diversion. SigNature DNA is a botanical mark used to authenticate products in a unique manner that essentially cannot be copied. APDN also provides BioMaterial GenoTyping™ by detecting genomic DNA in natural materials to authenticate finished products. Both technologies protect brands and products in a wide range of industries and provide a forensic chain of evidence that can be used to prosecute perpetrators. To learn more, go to www.adnas.com.
